Planning Manager Reimers introduced Scott Martin of RRM Design Group to the Planning Commission. He briefed the Planning Commission regarding the purpose of the tour and requested that the Planning Commission observe each development individually and consider what types of mixed-use developments would be best for the upcoming draft Specific Plan and future mixed-use developments. He also spoke explained various architectural concepts to the Planning Commission as each site was visited.

Scott Martin, RRM Design Group, pointed out detailing at each site, detail placement, pedestrian activity, pedestrian features and amenities, privacy, open space, parklets, landscaping, visual cues such as paving and courtyards, and noise mitigation.

Commissioner Cordes – Asked if the City has the ability to influence what types businesses are in mixed-use developments.

Commissioner Leung – Expressed concern regarding parking in mixed-use developments. He felt that courtyard features are attractive and resident friendly. He further commented on parklets and lane reduction.

Vice-Chairman Haddad – Asked if buildings should contrast in appearance and what noise reduction measures could be taken for those who reside in mixed-use developments.

Chairman O’Leary – Asked about how parking would be accommodated in mixed-use developments in Temple City.

Scott Martin, RRM Design Group, stated that one of the goals in mixed-use developments is to increase pedestrian activity therefore reducing the need for parking spaces. He added that pedestrian friendly features such as courtyards, benches, and fountains away from the street would help reduce noise. Lastly, he stated that the buildings within a mixed-use area do not have to be the same however, the buildings in the area should complement each other.

Planning Manager Reimers stated that the City can push directionally for certain types of businesses through parking requirements. He added that underground parking would be a possibility for mixed-use developments in Temple City.
