Special Recognition and Profound Appreciation:

The City of Temple City would like to thank the Disaster Management Area Coordinators of Los Angeles County. In addition, the City also owes no small debt of gratitude to Michael Martinet, Brenda Hunemiller, Clackamas County, Oregon and Rosemead School District.

Vicki Harguth, the Clackamas County's Emergency Management Coordinator and Cindy Kolomechuck, Clackamas Hazard Mitigation Specialist graciously shared their plan. While there are differences between the climate and topography of Clackamas County, Oregon and the greater Los Angeles basin, the Clackamas County plan was so well organized that it was easily adapted to suit the needs of the independent cities and school districts of Los Angeles County.

Additionally, Amy Enomoto-Perez, Ed.D., Superintendent of Rosemead School District, has volunteered her time in serving on the City's Natural Hazard Mitigation Plan Committee, as well as providing Staff with a copy of Rosemead School District's Local Hazard Mitigation Plan.

Both agencies have politely allowed us to use their plans as a guide for developing the City's Natural Hazard Mitigation Plan. The generosity that Rosemead School District, Clackamas County, Los Angeles County, and their emergency management personnel, illustrates how people in the emergency management profession are unselfish and willing to assist others in the profession.

The City of Temple City has obtained various reports, plans and data, from a variety of agencies, cities, counties, and states throughout the country, as part of the research in producing this document. Thanks to all of the agencies that were so generous in sharing their ideas and plans with fellow emergency management colleagues.
