The winners were announced last Thursday and presented with a special recognition yard sign and gift basket by Temple City Mayor Tom Chavez.

Now in its seventh year, the contest received 27 entries. According to parks and recreation director Cathy Burroughs, prior contests attracted more than 60 entries.

"The number of applicants was down this year, presumably from the recent and unprecedented wind storms," said Burroughs. "But drive any street in town and you'll still see a strong sense of the holiday spirit."

A driving map with addresses of the winners is available at City Hall and Live Oak Park Community Center. It can also be downloaded here.

Winners have been asked to light their displays through January 1.
